UC DAVIS

SCHOOL OF LAW

INTERNATIONAL PROGRAMS

WELCOMING MESSAGES

From the Dean

The University of California, Davis School of Law (King Hall) is proud of the innovative educational programs that we have designed and implemented for international lawyers over the past 22 years. Our goal has been to provide the knowledge and skills that contemporary lawyers need to serve their clients in the global economy.

Our school is proud of its leadership in welcoming and supporting lawyers from throughout the world to our school and the UC Davis campus. We value the exchange of ideas and perspectives that define these international law programs. Moreover, we are particularly pleased that so many of our outstanding faculty as well as distinguished members of the California legal community participate as instructors in our programs.

We hope that you will join one of our international programs and that we will see you soon in Davis. You will find the educational experience professionally enriching, and you will encounter an intellectually stimulating community of friends, faculty and colleagues.

Sincerely,

Kevin R. Johnson
Dean, School of Law

From the Director

We are pleased to share with you the latest information about our International Law Programs for 2011-2012.

As part of the University of California, School of Law, you will experience an excellent legal and educational program that combines a theoretical and practical approach to U.S. and international law.

The dynamic California legal and business communities stand at the crossroads between East and West. You will enjoy a unique opportunity to build camaraderie through cross-cultural experiences that last long after the program ends. We are grateful to our friends, colleagues and alumni in the United States and around the world who continue to encourage us to expand our program offerings. Look for more in the future!

See you in California!

Beth Greenwood

UNIVERSITY AND LOCATION

University of California

The University of California (UC) is one of the finest public institutions of higher education in the United States, with many professional schools including five law schools located at its campuses in Berkeley, Davis, Irvine, Los Angeles and San Francisco. The UC Davis general library contains more than 3.29 million volumes, and the Mabie Law Library more than 425,000 volumes plus more than 150,000 volume-equivalents of microforms and a large network that provides access to a growing list of compact discs and online services.

The UC Davis School of Law is a top tier U.S. law school. U.S. News & World Report currently ranks the School of Law at the University of California, Davis 23rd among all U.S. law schools, placing us in the top tier with Harvard, Yale, Stanford, UC Berkeley and UCLA. Our students consistently perform well on the California bar examination. All courses offered through the International Law Programs are MCLE-approved by the California and New York Bar Associations. The International Law Section of the State Bar of California is a co-sponsor of these programs.

About the City of Davis

The UC Davis campus is located in the city of Davis. Davis has a population of 64,938 and is a popular place for professionals and their families because it is safe, comfortable and has a variety of recreational opportunities. Known as an ecologically aware and socially innovative town, Davis has more than 84 kilometers of bicycle paths and more bicycles per capita than any other city in the nation. It also has 210 hectares of parks, greenbelts and open spaces.

Davis is located in the Central Valley about 20 kilometers from Sacramento, the state capital, where many of the trade and business policies for California are determined. Davis is within two hours of the San Francisco Bay Area and the world famous Napa Valley. Only two hours from Lake Tahoe, Davis is also within close proximity to some of California's most beautiful and historic areas such as the Sierra Nevada Gold Country, Yosemite Valley and Monterey.

SUMMER PROGRAMS

Orientation in U.S.A. Law

Sunday, July 8-Saturday, August 4, 2012

Program audience and content

The 2012 Orientation in U.S.A. Law program marks the 23rd anniversary of this successful international summer law program. Lawyers, judges, prosecutors and defenders, notaries, law professors, pre-LL.M. candidates and business professionals attend this program to gain a better understanding of the theories and practices of the U.S. legal system. Participants engage in more than 170 hours of classes, seminars and on-site observations. At the same time, participants enrich the program with diverse perspectives gleaned from their legal systems. While the program is fast-paced, there are numerous social activities that foster the building of strong and lasting friendships.

Academic credit from this program may be applied toward the summer International Commercial Law LL.M. and/or the Licentiate in International Transactions Involving the United States.

This course is open to anyone from the legal or business community. There are no admission requirements or prerequisites. This program does not require a TOEFL score. However, we do recommend that the participants have a good working knowledge of the English language as all lectures are taught in English.

“The combination of tenured faculty and practicing attorneys and other experts makes the International Commercial Law program extraordinarily dynamic. The faculty was motivating and engaging, delivering a compact and in-depth ‘package of knowledge’ in a short period of time. This experience exceeded my expectations, changed my perception of myself and prepared me to interact with the international community with confidence.”

SUMMER PROGRAMS

Fifteenth Annual International Commercial Law Seminar Cologne, Germany

Dispute Resolution in International Commerce and Investment

Monday, June 18-Friday, June 29, 2012

The University of California, Davis and the University of Cologne—in cooperation with the German Bar Association (DeutscherAnwaltVerein), the German Institute of Arbitration (DIS) and the Arbitration Documentation and Information Center (ADIC)—are proud to present the fifteenth annual International Commercial Law Seminar.

The exponential growth of international trade over the past decades has led to an increase in the number of disputes that arise in connection with commerce and investment. International attorneys are faced with numerous challenges and issues that require dispute resolution skills. Join attorneys from around the globe in this intensive seminar that will provide new perspectives and tools for dispute resolution in international commerce and investment.

Leading authorities from the faculties of law at the University of California, Davis, the University of Cologne, and Indiana University will present lectures, case studies and simulations. Participation of attorneys and other professionals from around the world provides a unique opportunity for discussion of a wide variety of views from many different legal perspectives.

Academic credit from this International Commercial Law seminar may be applied toward the summer International Commercial Law LL.M. This seminar also qualifies for continuing legal education (CLE) credit in New York and California.

Costs*

Nonrefundable application fee: U.S. $150

Tuition: U.S. $2,988 ($2,888 if you enroll by April 15, 2012)

Customized Training for Organizations of All Sizes

We can present many of these courses and programs for your organization. Don't see exactly what you need? We'll create a customized program specifically designed to meet the needs of your law firm or company. For example, should your firm need a one- or two-week overview of the U.S. legal system at your office for your associates in your country, we can create a program to fit your needs. In addition, should your company only desire to learn certain aspects of the American legal system related to commercial law or any other legal area, a program can be customized for any length of time. For more information or a detailed program proposal, please contact us.

Licentiate in International Transactions Involving the United States

Requires two summers of study during July and August (8 weeks total).

Participants who successfully complete Orientation in U.S.A. Law and two specialized programs in International Commercial Law are eligible to apply for the Licentiate in International Transactions Involving the United States.

In addition to successfully completing the three programs, participants must write a paper on an applied aspect of international law.

English for Legal Professionals

Friday, June 22-Friday, July 6, 2012

Designed for practicing lawyers and law students, this program provides an ideal training ground for learning legal terminology in English. This is an outstanding preliminary course for those continuing on with the Orientation in U.S.A. Law program; however, the English for Legal Professionals program is not a substitute for the legal training provided during the Orientation in U.S.A. Law program. The English for Legal Professionals program strictly focuses on improving English language skills. The course consists of three core components:

- Legal vocabulary
- Legal reading and discussion
- Communication skills

Participants also choose two of three electives:

- Business writing
- American vocabulary and idioms
- Public speaking

Costs*

- Nonrefundable application fee: U.S. $160
- Tuition: U.S. $1,495

Tuition and fees subject to change.*

"I had the great experience of living with people from 18 different countries. Besides having new friends from around the world, I improved my skills in solving common law and civil law problems within an international environment. It was really great. King Hall is a place very well fitted for studying. It's located on a gorgeous campus. The School of Law, the library and the computer-lab are available 24 hours a day."

—Marcelo, Brazil, LL.M. graduate

Content

This innovative graduate degree was developed in response to the demand for a part-time degree program that provides in-depth knowledge in international commercial transactions.

The degree can be completed in three, four or five summers. This format allows foreign and domestic lawyers to leave their practices for short periods of intense study.

Candidates begin the master's degree program by examining the fundamentals of the U.S. legal system with special emphasis on business and trade law. They complete the Orientation in U.S.A. Law program, two of three specialized programs in international commercial law, and the elective courses.

Examining the U.S. legal system in-depth provides participants with a model both for comparative legal analysis and understanding a legal system that is considered highly responsive to the globalized marketplace. With this foundation, participants go on to study global trading systems and the dynamic financial and economic forces driving economic internationalization and trade liberalization. The program consists of course work and a research paper equivalent in scope to a thesis. Thirty-six units are required to complete the degree. Graduates of this program have gone on to sit for the bar examinations in New York and California in order to become U.S. attorneys.

Master of Laws (LL.M.)

*A one-year, in-residence program
August 2011-May 2012*

Focus

A full-time curriculum at the UC Davis, School of Law that allows each student to develop expertise in a chosen area of particular interest, engage in special projects or original research and obtain a basic knowledge of the U.S. legal system.

Content

The Master of Laws (LL.M.) program prepares students for their professional roles in the internationalized economy and in global integration. The program provides LL.M. candidates with many opportunities, including gaining a basic knowledge of the U.S. legal system, developing special expertise in a particular area and doing special projects and original research under the direction of a faculty member.

LL.M. candidates must complete a minimum of 20 semester units. Foreign LL.M. candidates take two courses especially designed for foreign law graduates that provide a foundation for understanding the U.S. legal system. Participants earn the remainder of their required course credit by taking regular courses at the UC Davis School of Law with American J.D. students.

The law school also admits foreign LL.M. candidates on a thesis rather than a course basis. The thesis track requires a substantial proposed research project falling within the area of expertise of a law faculty member who is willing to supervise the student's research and who strongly recommends graduate study for the applicant. The law school accepts thesis-track students only if their proposed thesis is likely to make a significant scholarly contribution.

LL.M. candidates must complete their degree during two consecutive semesters of residential study. LL.M. candidates are encouraged to enroll in Orientation in U.S.A. Law, offered the month before the Master of Laws (LL.M.) program begins.

In keeping with its tradition and to ensure adequate attention to its students, the Master of Laws (LL.M.) program is selective and admits approximately 15 students each year. Applicants must have a minimum TOEFL iBT score of 88-89 (or 230 computer-based or 570 paper-based score). An IELTS score of 6.5 is also acceptable.

Graduates of this master's degree program have gone on to sit for the bar examinations in New York and California in order to become U.S. attorneys.

"I have not traveled very much in the United States, but I have to say, I love Davis! It's small and safe, a great place to study, and the people here are very nice. I like to work out at the recreation center, then sit along the lake near King Hall and watch the ducks that roam around campus. The LL.M. program is small and the atmosphere is so amicable. Professors are knowledgeable and helpful, and the staff is very considerate. They all do their best to help the LL.M. students succeed. Obtaining the LL.M. degree at King Hall will help me fulfill my dream of becoming an international lawyer. During my time at UC Davis I have learned how to study efficiently, and I have made friends with people from all over the world."

Online Tax Course

Taught by Daniel L. Simmons, professor of law, University of California, Davis School of Law

Learn to analyze U.S. taxation of multinational investments, including jurisdiction of tax, the U.S. tax system, foreign tax credits, treaties and transfer pricing. Examine the U.S. income tax laws and policies related to the taxation of foreign income of people in the United States and U.S. income of foreign people outside of the United States. Emphasis will be on the fundamental issues of cross-border activities, including jurisdiction to impose taxes, taxable nexus, sources of income, the foreign tax credit system for avoiding double taxation, the U.S. anti-deferral regime and income tax treaties.

“When an opportunity arose to work for my teacher, I took it,” notes Daniel Simmons. Fifteen years later, as Congress rewrote the Internal Revenue Code, Simmons would occupy the prestigious position of “Professor in Residence” in the Office of the Chief Counsel of the IRS. “You cannot practice law without understanding the income tax system,” said the 1971 King Hall alumnus. “There’s very little we can do in today’s society that doesn’t have income tax implications.” For this reason, the tax lawyer is both the ultimate specialist and the ultimate generalist, practicing an esoteric brand of law that touches practically every transaction in American society. “Contracts, marital property, trusts, estate planning, immigration, corporations, partnerships, securities, torts, constitutional law, employment discrimination—the tax lawyer must be knowledgeable in all.”

California International Law Center (CILC)

Building on a tradition of international law scholarship and programs that dates to its founding more than 40 years ago, the University of California, Davis School of Law proudly launched the California International Law Center at King Hall in February 2009. CILC (pronounced “silk”) fosters the work of faculty, students and alumni in international, comparative and transnational law through speakers series, curricular and career development, and partnership with organizations such as the American Society of International Law and the Robert F. Kennedy Center for Justice and Human Rights. Our location in California, a state that enjoys both the most diverse population in the nation and one of the largest economies in the world, positions us well in this effort.

Intellectual Property and Technology Commercialization

Sunday, June 3-Friday, June 15, 2012

This new two-week program has been developed for international lawyers, technology managers and scientific professionals in the public sector or small-to-medium enterprises who want to understand successful U.S. models of intellectual property management. Participants will learn strategies and tactics for managing intellectual property (IP) that maximize the commercial success and public benefit of their research and development investments.

The course will cover topics* such as U.S. and international IP protection, IP management for commercialization, licensing, IP issues in negotiating an international agreement, starting IP and technology transfer offices, start-ups and spin-offs from public sector institutions. To reinforce classroom presentations, the program will be based on lectures, hands-on case studies and field visits to Silicon Valley, Napa or to the greater Sacramento area.

This unique course is hosted by the UC Davis International Law Programs and Public Intellectual Property Resource for Agriculture (PIPRA). Lecturers include world renowned instructors from the UC Davis School of Law and other prominent law schools, outstanding legal practitioners and business experts representing major U.S. firms.
