INSTRUCTOR SPOTLIGHT

“Through teaching, I learn. I stay connected. Teaching enables me to better manage my own projects and programs and also to understand from the students’ perspective.”

SUKHVIR BRAR works in health care and has more than 10 years of experience in statistical and predictive analysis, data forecasting and data visualization. He teaches Introduction to Data Visualization with Tableau and Tableau Dashboards for Exploratory Data Analysis.

Why do you teach?

I have been in data analytics for over 10 years and in data visualization for over five. I have found that teaching is a great way to give back to the community. Knowledge is powerful, and everyone should always continue learning. I want my students to understand that data visualization is a powerful tool and there are many ways to represent the same data. The goal is to find the best way to share the story of your data.

How will learning data visualization positively impact a student’s career?

It’s a powerful tool students can use in their analytical careers. As companies move away from standard reporting and toward interactive dashboards, data visualization will increase students’ skill sets.

Why is data visualization important?

Analysts need to express their data differently depending on their intended audience. Having many ways to showcase the same data will allow analysts to find the best way to present it.
